For a night out on the town, the ‘Entertainment Center of the South’ never ceases to amaze with world-class dining, luxury shopping, and major sporting events.

With low taxes and a blossoming development market, Nashville is attractive to both families and businesses, with over 81 people moving to the city each day and entire companies relocating almost overnight.

Nashville entered the 20th century as a sleepy college town and state capital. And of all the city’s music attractions, none has earned as much widespread acclaim as Broadway’s Honky Tonks. Located in the heart of Downtown Nashville on Lower Broadway, this street features a row of bars and restaurants, live music reverberating from doors and windows, all establishments offering free entry, enabling visitors to check out dozens of bands in one night. ## AREAS WE COVER

Compass Nashville serves clients relocating into, around, and out of all of Middle Tennessee. Although we focus on Davidson County, Williamson County, and Rutherford County, our agents also serve the Greater Nashville area, having driven the two-lane country roads, explored the hiking trails and bike paths, and learned the intricate details of the housing markets in every Middle Tennessee county.

COUNTIES WE SERVE

DAVIDSON COUNTY | POPULATION: 715,884

There's a reason why Davidson County is one of the fastest-growing and most populated counties in the Volunteer State. The downtown is an internationally renowned entertainment hub, a center for urban-modern homes and high rises, and the location of the Tennessee State Capitol. Here you'll find a panoply of historic architecture, outdoor art installations, state government centers, non-profit headquarters, and live music Honky Tonks, all on the same block.

Davidson County is home to 24/7 live music, bustling nightlife, trendy boutiques, coffee shops, bars, and upscale restaurants. There are also elegant and peaceful suburban neighborhoods shaded by mature trees and complete with a mix of Tudors, estates, restored centennials, Cape Cod and Craftsman-style homes, and modern new-builds. It is both vibrant and memorable, trendy and modern, yet also vintage and historic.

WILLIAMSON COUNTY | POPULATION: 247,726

Williamson County cities, villages, and rural areas offer an entirely unique experience. Out of Nashville but still just a short drive from it, Williamson County is home to Middle Tennessee gems like Franklin, Leipers Fork, Thompson's Station, and Brentwood. Residents enjoy larger parcels in the rural paradise that this area is known for.

Tennessee's most affluent county is idyllic and peaceful, a living tapestry of rolling hills, farms, stables, and forested lands. The county has outstanding public schools, a strong and growing business climate, and the same verve for live music, the arts, and festivals that one will find in Nashville.

Williamson County is adorned with historic homes, estates, sprawling ranches, centennial farmhouses, Tudors, and quiet, cozy neighborhoods dotted with new-builds and townhomes. The county has much of the same aesthetic and sense of community strength as Nashville does, but interplayed against a backdrop of a quieter, more rural setting.

RUTHERFORD COUNTY | POPULATION: 341,486

A powerful magnet for new residents and businesses, Rutherford County is a part of everything that metropolitan Nashville has to offer but at a more affordable price point. Rapid development and an eye for the aesthetics in urban design and planning have made "RuthCo" a modern-day suburbia, ideal for anyone who desires a comfortable life just outside the city. Rich in Tennessee history and culture, Rutherford County is also home to historic sites like Stones River National Battlefield, Oaklands Mansion, Bradley Academy Museum, Historic Cannonsburgh Village, and the Sam Davis Home and Museum.

In 2007, Amanda experienced firsthand the challenges of moving a family to a new city. Amanda's husband had accepted a physician's Residency appointment at Vanderbilt, and the couple had ninety days to sell their home in Texas and purchase a place to live in Nashville.

This experience inspired Amanda to begin a career in real estate, to help local residents find their perfect Nashville home, but especially to help the many incoming families that move to Nashville every day. Amanda began by launching Medical Moving Partners, a full-service firm designed to assist medical professionals in relocating to Nashville.

Soon after launch, Amanda realized that the need for relocation services extended far beyond incoming medical professionals. She began offering relocation services to new residents from all walks of life and backgrounds. Her deep understanding of Nashville neighborhoods and surrounding counties and her connections with locally-owned service providers, moving companies, handymen, contractors, home inspectors, staging experts, and house designers all serve her and her clients well in facilitating an exemplary relocation to Music City.

After many years in full-time real estate, Amanda's return clients and word-of-mouth referrals have helped expand her business far beyond a relocation niche to include local residents who are looking to move into a new home that better meets their needs.

Amanda inspires both comfort and confidence in home buyers and sellers, both those local to Nashville and those abroad. But when she's not making real estate in Nashville an easy, stress-free process for her clients, she's working on her family's hobby farm in Arrington, Tennessee with her husband, two sons, and a heartwarming menagerie of farm critters.
